

BROOKWOOD CENTER FOR LEARNING

The Brookwood Replication Journey

A long-term mentorship program for organizations called to build purposeful communities for adults with disabilities

Brookwood's Center for Learning is honored to walk alongside organizations who share our heart for adults with disabilities. The Replication Journey Mentorship Program is designed for communities who are looking for a long-term relationship and are ready to do more than attend a conference or take a single tour.

Whether you are launching something brand new or strengthening a program already underway, this mentorship journey meets you exactly where you are — built on relationship, not transaction.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Why a year-long commitment?

Real organizational change — the kind that sticks — takes time. A 12-month journey allows us to walk through seasons with you: setting a foundation, encountering challenges, celebrating milestones, and making course corrections together.

Will there be different tiers to choose from?

Absolutely. Every organization is at different stages of development and needs different levels of support. Together we will determine what best fits your program and timeline.

Can we customize our tier?

Yes. Each tier is a starting point, not a ceiling. During your Discovery Call, we will listen carefully to your goals and design a partnership plan that genuinely fits your needs.

What if we are not sure which tier is right for us?

Start with a Discovery Call. We will walk through your organization's stage, goals, and capacity together — and give you our honest recommendation.

Is enrollment currently open?

The Replication Journey Mentorship Program is currently in development, and enrollment is expected to open Summer 2026. Spots will be limited — we encourage you to express your interest now.

Are scholarship options available?

Yes. Scholarship support is available for qualifying organizations. Please inquire about our commitment to faithful stewardship and accessibility.
